Course description:
Dante’s Divine Comedy incorporates philosophy, theology, history, art, mythology, spirituality, mysticism, and theatriesthough giving the account of a journey through the afterworld. Despite being the foundational masterpiece of the Italian language, the poem reaches out to numerous other cultures in the Mediterranean area and beyond, to create a diverse, rich plot, something we might call an “international” epic. Judaism, Islam, Provençal poetry, scholastic philosophy from Paris, and constant references to Roman and Greek culture are some of the topics it presents. As narration of an afterlife experience, the poem closely scrutinizes moral issues and their consequences, which are applicable to any era and any place. Students will be required to “translate” such concepts into contemporary issues.

Learning Goals:
At the end of the course students will be able to account for the development of ideas from the Middle Ages to early modernity and understand the intricate dynamics of humanistic and scientific disciplines. As part of the investigation of the moral issues connected to the material, they will learn to locate human actions in a historical and philosophical context. They will, moreover, become familiar with the theoretical infrastructure originating cultural production and human experience. This will allow them to view literature in the context of medieval culture(s) and values, as well as understand the complex interactions of critical interpretation and creative process. As a result of the materials covered and class discussion, students will be able to express complex ideas in standard written English and to communicate effectively in modes that are appropriate to the discipline. The course will also teach them to evaluate primary texts, to use the conventions of attribution and citation correctly, and to process information from multiple sources to generate new insights.

Requirements:
Students in this course will be required to do the assigned readings ahead of class and complete assigned activities. There will be one 5-10 minute presentation on one canto of the Divine Comedy. The main project will be a six-page research paper using MLA style. There will also be a Midterm and a Final Exam.

Required Texts:
The entire text of the Mandelbaum translation is available on the Digital Dante website
https://digitaldante.columbia.edu/dante/divine-comedy/
Here are two other websites with resources related to the text:

Departmental Goal II and III: Cultural Proficiency and Professional Preparation
This course satisfies the Core Curriculum Learning Goal: AH (o and p).

Area of Inquiry C: Arts and Humanities

Goals o and p:
o. Examine critically theoretical issues concerning the nature of reality, human experience, knowledge, value, and the cultural production related to the topics addressed.
p. Analyze arts and literatures in themselves and in relation to specific histories, values, languages, cultures, and technologies.

Final Paper:
This paper requires textual analysis of the primary text (the Divine Comedy) as well consulting secondary sources (at least three articles or book chapters on the specific topic you have selected). A list of topics will be distributed and students select one topic and write their paper of 6 full pages. See the following for MLA style guide:
https://owl.purdue.edu/owl/research_and_citation/mla_style/index.html

Plagiarism:
Written paper must result from your own creativity. When inspired by critical or theoretical material, you must acknowledge your indebtedness and credit the source in quotation marks and with references in parentheses. You must also give acknowledgement to your sources when paraphrasing a text. Your sources may be in print, electronic or any other media. When in doubt, please refer to the university policy on plagiarism and academic integrity:
http://academicintegrity.rutgers.edu/integrity.shtml

Attendance:
All students must attend regularly. No more than three absences are allowed; use them wisely, for health and other serious issues. Having more than three absences, arriving to class late, and engaging in behavior that is distracting to the rest of the class are grounds for a significantly lower mark in class participation.
